1. Students will develop a deep knowledge of a content area and a related cognate connected to curriculum and instruction.
2. Students will demonstrate the ability to plan, implement, analyze data, and author a dissertation.
3. Students will read, interpret, and critique scholarship in their academic field and across multiple fields.
4. Students will understand issues related to school and society including existing inequities.
5. Students will connect research with instructional practices that support learning and connect research to their professional practices.