

INSTRUCTIONAL SYSTEM DESIGN MANAGEMENT AND LEADERSHIP, CERT

for the Graduate Certificate in Instructional System Design Management and Leadership

Instructional System Design Management and Leadership (ISDML) Graduate Certificate requires 16 credit hours to complete. The ISDML CERT is designed to train individuals to aspire to design and develop technology-enriched and -enabled learning systems for broadly defined learning and performance goals in workplace contexts. The ISDML CERT equips students in foundational knowledge and competencies in instructional system design and learning technology integration for practical application purposes in workplace settings. In addition, the coursework will help learners develop skills in various topical areas (e.g., project management, program evaluation, consulting with organizations). We anticipate the proposed CERT to produce capable instructional designers who can lead efforts to meet many increasing needs of workplaces and workforce development to expand learning and development modalities from face-to-face to virtual settings, in response to changing organizational needs as well as major systemic changes. Upon completing the CERT, students will be able to:

- Modify existing learning systems and solutions for remote and online delivery.
- Design scalable learning systems and solutions for developing working professionals' capabilities in the workplace.
- Develop learning systems and solutions for broadly defined learning and performance outcomes in the workplace across industries.
- Facilitate adoptions of innovations in broadly defined learning and performance contexts in the workplace.
- Evaluate the impact of learning systems and solutions in the workplace.
- Manage the processes and resources involved in instructional system design.

The Graduate Certificate programs in the Department of Education Policy, Organization and Leadership are designed to meet the academic and professional interests of individuals preparing for careers as academic professionals, adult educators, college professors, corporate trainers, educational policy analysts, governmental administrators, instructional designers/technologists, non-profit representatives, organizational development specialists, and university administration leaders.

Admission

The Department of Education Policy, Organization and Leadership carefully considers all applicants for graduate study. Interested applicants should start at the College of Education Graduate Programs website (<http://education.illinois.edu/programs/grad/>). The quality of the applicant's undergraduate and graduate training and grade point average are primary considerations. Other important factors evaluated include the three letters of recommendation and statement of purpose. International applicants are required to submit proof of English proficiency. Specific requirements and waiver options are listed on the Graduate College website (<https://grad.illinois.edu/admissions/instructions/04c/>).
