

PSYCHOLOGY: DEVELOPMENTAL PSYCHOPATHOLOGY, PHD

for the Doctor of Philosophy in Psychology Developmental Psychopathology Concentration

This concentration is available to students in the developmental and clinical-community areas within the Psychology PhD program. The field of developmental psychopathology has grown exponentially in the past twenty years to become a major area of interest in the field of Psychology. This concentration will provide specialized training and professional development guidance within the field of developmental psychopathology; provide exposure to multiple theoretical perspectives and research methods that are used across different labs; facilitate opportunities to be involved in research with multiple faculty, broadening the scope of training and allowing for stronger letters of recommendation when entering the job market; facilitate successful job searches in this area of specialization, for which specific certification in the field would be of benefit.

Students wishing to pursue the concentration should contact the Psychology Graduate Studies Office (psych-grad@illinois.edu).
