The crops concentration is designed for students with an interest in agronomic crop plants. Students study the diversity of crop plants—how they grow and how they are grown. This concentration prepares students for careers in crop production and marketing, cropping systems management, plant breeding, and seed merchandising, or for entrance into graduate school.