The Asian American Studies Department offers an undergraduate major and interdisciplinary minor.

The major in Asian American Studies explores Asian Americans across disciplines and cultures. The program provides both a broad and a deep approach to theory, research, and multidisciplinary study. The major will prepare students with the research skills that may lead to graduate study in the humanities or social sciences, or career fields including health and medicine, education, law, business, social work, digital and media industries, policy advocacy, politics, academic administration, and other fields that address Asian American issues.

This minor represents a coherent program for students who wish to deepen their study of Asian American histories, experiences, contemporary issues and social problems as a part of their liberal education and understanding of race and diversity in the United States and transnationally. It is relevant to curricula such as letters and sciences, business, economics, education, health studies, pre-law, social work, or urban and regional planning.
